

TALENT

BANK of Ireland, in partnership with Cut-e, yesterday launched Talent Rising, a national development programme aimed at delivering high-impact solutions for economic and social challenges faced in Ireland.

The eight-week programme creates an opportunity for 12 high-performing, early career individuals across multiple organisations, to collaborate and create tangible solutions to help address issues of national importance.

Liam McLoughlin, Bank of Ireland's CEO of Retail Ireland said, the bank was delighted to be involved.

"This programme, which nurtures a dynamic talent pool of the best and brightest young employees from a number of Ireland's leading organisations, provides them with a unique opportunity to collaboratively tackle national significant issues, whilst also benefiting from professional development. The programme will run until the end of May. Businesses involved include Accenture and Chanelle Group.

